High quality inverters can be quite efficient but it still needs to be taken into account when thinking about how long your battery will supply power to the inverter. For example, an inverter outputting 1000W at 230V will draw current from a 12V battery as follows: $1000W/12V = 83.33A$ (Power/Voltage = Current)

The 240v fridge was in the van when we bought it. It travels well and works fine when on shore power but we are currently installing solar so need 12v fridge as do not want to run 240v through inverter. We have had a local quote to convert to 12v with automatic switch-over when connected to 240v.

Probably the simplest scheme would be if you already have a 12 volt DC to AC of any voltage transformer type inverter. then a connection to the transformer primary can provide the 12 volts AC. Actually, using the 24 volts across the whole primary could also work because with the much higher frequency the fan impedance will limit the current.
